Pay Quartiles

The below charts highlight the gender distribution at Merseyrail across four equally sized quartiles, each containing 300 colleagues.

Merseyrail is an employer of choice within the local city region and we continue to be committed in ensuring our employees are rewarded equally and fairly regardless of their gender or any other protected characteristic.

Whilst we are confident that men and women are equally paid for doing equivalent jobs across the business, as many salaries are achieved through collective bargaining with our recognised trade unions, we understand the need to reduce our gender pay gap. As we have indicated in previous reports, the rail industry has been male dominated in the operational and management disciplines and whilst great strides have been taken in the managerial posts, with over 30% females in our management population and an 80/20 gender split within our Directorate, we still struggle to attract females to our operational roles. We currently have only 8% female representation within our Train Drivers grade and 14% overall, in frontline operational roles.

As a direct result of this, in 2019 our Women in Merseyrail network group was created to see how we can attract more females into the business and what barriers are currently in place that stops females from progressing into the operational roles and more senior roles. Through events in various locations across Liverpool, it allowed for a supportive networking opportunity for our employees. We held an inclusive event in 2020 for International Women's Day and a further virtual event later in the year due to Covid-19 restrictions.

Before Covid restrictions commenced Merseyrail were also headline sponsors for a Women's Conference in Liverpool on 27th February 2020 which was the first of its kind. The conference was about leading with courage & confidence in a male dominated environment and looking to build mental toughness in male dominated industries to change the gender landscape for men and women.

We hope that by our increased continued focus internally with our Women in Merseyrail network and externally with partners and stakeholders across the Liverpool City Region and the Rail Industry, we will be able to showcase the opportunities that will make us a more attractive employer for female candidates.
